Monica Alexandra

Monica started her career in Phoenix, AZ, performing and co-choreographing for the WNBA's PHX Mercury hip hop squad. After her season with the hip hop squad, Monica was selected to model and perform in a state sponsored anti-tobacco campaign and commercial, and was hired as a performer for the Legends show held at Casino Arizona. She then moved to Los Angeles to continue pursuing her modeling and dance career. While there, she performed on a promotional commercial for Nip Tuck, modeled and performed for Paul Mitchell Paris and New York fashion shows, and performed numerous shows for Spanish-American actress, comedian, and flamenco guitarist, Charo. After a couple of years in Los Angeles, Monica moved to Las Vegas and performed at Planet Hollywood in a show produced by Emmy Award winning Broadway director, Jerry Mitchell. She continued to develop her career working with artists like Pitbull and Marc Anthony. She has been able to grace the stage of the world renowned burlesque show, Ivan Kane's Forty Deuce, and has continued to excel her burlesque career here in Arizona and around the country.

Jen Martin

As a performing arts professional, Jen has spent most of her career in New York City. Her choreography and performance credits span all areas of the entertainment world including stage, film, television, music videos, web-based productions, and industrials. Jen's credits are numerous, and include work for ABC's Good Morning America, Pepsi, Johnnie Walker, Armani, and Broadway Cares.

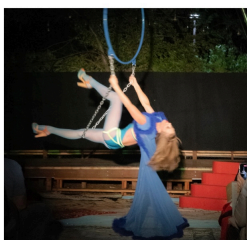

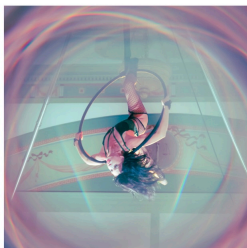

After years of performing, Jen found her niche in aerial dance. She is a founder and choreographer of AERA Dance, a past Board Member of the U.S. Aerial Championships, the creator of the "Red Velvet" aerial dance class for Crunch Fitness, and the former Director of Aerial Programming for New York City's Body & Pole. Jen has authored aerial hoop and hammock instructor training programs, and has choreographed and performed with the performance duo, Lyracle. She loves working with both traditional and custom aerial apparatus, and finds that a background in dance helps to uniquely position her to combine and meld dance, aerial and acrobatics throughout the industry. Recent projects include co-creation of the Forbidden Garden Experience, a variety show that includes aerial, burlesque, live music and projection mapping, in addition to creating solo acts for a variety of shows within Arizona.
